

Hey! I'm (Ella), a student at (Penn State).

I'm from New Jersey, where I'm registered to vote. It's a reliably blue state.

Pennsylvania, on the other hand, is a critical swing state. In fact, whoever wins Pennsylvania will likely win the whole election.

So I wondered: could I change my registration to vote in Pennsylvania – where my vote could really make a difference – even though I only live in the state during the school year?

The answer is ABSOLUTELY YES! And it's quick and easy to do.

If you live in Pennsylvania for just 30 days before the election, you can switch your registration online at iwillvote.com. That's iwillvote.com. You just need a student ID.

The deadline is October 21st. So do it now – it will be the most important thing you do today!

PA has more college students than any other swing state. So our votes have the power to decide this whole election... and determine our future!
